

16 Days of Activism against GBV

Training on Business Plan Development

Social and economic skills can play a key role in women and girls' empowerment, contribute into drug abuse prevention and its related crime including GBV. However, the socio-economic resilience calls upon skills in Business and sustainable livelihood. That is the reason why COB in collaboration with its partners, have organized 12 hours an online training (4 sessions of 3 hrs/session: 6th to 13th Dec. 2021) for Leaders of CSOs intervening in Drug prevention, women empowerment and youth livelihood development. They have been trained to train their members. Trainers were: Dr Sarfaraj Karim (Director of Management Straty _ India), Mr Jamshid Khan Shinwari (UN_ Afgh-istan) and Dr Noorul Anwar (National Health Academy _ India). Thanks for the participants and partnerts

"Young girls can do more thing once they are self-motivated and encouraged. We need to focus on what we want to be and stand for experiencing what others are doing. But what is more relevant, focus on our own dream makes us super: Yes, that is true, I have myself tried and proved it", said Miss Delicia.

Esther: "Girls power always remain in what they want to be in Future. Young boys running behind me for marriage have many times challenged me but I did take break after my BAC because I thought about what I was decided to be: "A Young Generation Model", Look, now I am in front of you calling upon you integrity to stand for you future".

For Ma Fille: " It is impossible to study as young girl without integrated Model. Sometimes, we need to follow our elder sisters, mothers or others who are making difference at school, in the community and around the world. We, girls, we can!"
